

Making Your Bridal Shower Invitations Special

Wording is an important consideration if you are planning to send out bridal shower invitations. Concerns such as what approach to take, what poems or rhymes to use, and how to inform the guests about the theme of the shower are all important concerns. These factors are important in ensuring that the bridal shower invitations will stand out for the receivers.

Details that are commonly included in bridal shower invitations are the full name of the bride, and sometimes of the groom, the name of the RSVP person, the date by which guests must RSVP, and of course the date, time and location of the shower. Some other details that you may want to include in the bridal shower invitations are the date of the wedding, the name of the store the bride is registered in, and the name of the host. Showers that have a specific theme should have the bridal shower invitations worded so as to reflect this information. And if the shower is to be a surprise for the bride, the guests should be informed of the time when the bride is expected to arrive.

Bridal shower invitations can either take on a traditional, a casual, or a general tone. This of course will depend on the type of bridal shower you will be holding, as well as the personal preferences of the bride. Bridal shower invitations of the general type are usually the most basic, and often simply includes the invitation message, the name of the bride, and the time and location. Traditional messages are of course more formal in tone, and again include the brides name, the time and date of the event, and its location. Any requirements with regard to specific attire are also typically mentioned in traditional bridal shower invitations, as is the name of the partys host.

Casual bridal shower invitations tend to be more informal and even "cutesy" in its approach, and may take on the form of a simple rhyme. Of course details such as the name of the bride, as well as the date, time and location of the party should be included as well. A themed bridal shower often requires a different approach. These types of events normally reflect the theme of the event, and the invitation is written so the theme is clearly mentioned. This is particularly important if you want people to wear costumes to the party.
