

With Self Storage You have an Option

The self storage innovation has been a boon for both the entrepreneurs and the customers. The former benefited because here was new business model in home transportation which afforded good business on account of being able to offer attractive services to the clients. Self storage made the life of the customer easy as the problems associated with moving were much lesser. How did this come about? By providing smaller sized containers which could fit in a customers driveway or parking lot, the providers got rid of the problem of space and the associated road blocks that a big container caused in a neighborhood. Small size of the self storage containers meant that providers could place the containers for a longer duration as the customer wanted in his driveway to load in his own time. A relaxed time schedule meant lesser headaches for the provider and lesser anxiety for the customer. The schedule of delivery at the new place of residence could now also be decided by the client. Clients utilized this flexibility to hunt for their dream house and then prepare the house before asking the provider to deliver their belongings. What about no sure address for a month or two? No problems, because self storage solutions now provided for storing away the entire container, locked and sealed in secure company owned warehouses. The warehouses are designed to withstand all spectrum threats which include manmade threats such as burglary as well as the natural hazards of storms, rain and snow.

Self storage also means scalability of the containers, and the different sizes for different type of houses ensured that the need was matched by the size resulting in savings for the client. In traditional packers and movers, the standard truck sizes obviated this flexibility. Scalability also meant that clients could now segregate one type of belongings in one container and other type of items in yet another container. For instance, all furniture could be packed in one container, while all garage items in another. For those wishing to transport delicate items requiring air conditioning, could now hire specialized climate control self storage units. The flexibility afforded by having different sizes of containers meant that providers could now offer affordable package deals to suit every type of wallet. This financial flexibility meant that more business could then be generated by the entrepreneur. Self storage solutions have therefore been a boon for both the customer and the provider.
